TIME

4:30-5:30PM (PDT)

ZOOM

The central question facing teachers today as they seek to engage students in reading is "How can we help adolescents become critical readers in a digital age?" In this webinar, Troy Hicks will share what he learned in his research into adolescent reading practices in a dozen middle and high school classrooms and the subsequent tools created to assist students in connecting to their reading. Hicks will offer practical tips and highlight classroom practices that engage students in reading and thinking with both print and digital texts, thus encouraging reading instruction that reaches all students.
